

Pfautz Appointed Director Of Cooperative Program With Mississippi College

Harold W. Pfautz '40, professor of sociology, has been named director of the University's cooperative program with Tougaloo College in Mississippi.

Among the objectives of the project are expansion and strengthening of the Tougaloo faculty, development of a summer remedial program for pre-freshmen, enrichment of a tutorial system that is already in operation at Tougaloo, and provision of a fifth-year of study at Brown for Tougaloo alumni/ae preparing for graduate school.

Pfautz will devote full time during the new academic year to coordinating and executing these programs.

He will spend most of the first semester at Tougaloo, which is located just north of Jackson and is the only private Negro college in Mississippi.

His most recent visit to the southern campus began Sept. 9.

The appointment of Pfautz as project director was approved early in the summer by the Tougaloo trustees and administration after he had been nominated for the post by Brown President Barnaby C. Keeney.

One of Pfautz' chief concerns will be obtaining the services of members of the Brown community, many of whom have already indicated an interest in taking some part in the cooperative program.

Although it is expected that it will be many months before the effectiveness of the joint venture can be determined, it is possible that one of the first indications

P'broker Finds Kenya 'Poorer' But 'Richer'

A Pembroke junior who went to Kenya to "learn about people" has returned from her summer there with new insights into Africans and Americans alike.

Emily Hughes, an English Literature major, says she found that although Africans may be materially poorer than Americans, they are nevertheless richer in spirit.

She also discovered that most American collegians who go to the "dark continent" are not "rah-rah-gung-ho-let's-go-out-and-crusade-for-Africa" types.

Miss Hughes lived for two months in the town of Machakos, 40 miles southeast of Nairobi, the capital of the country. Her stay was under the auspices of Crossroads Africa, which this year sent a total of 300 young Americans over there to help Africans help themselves.

Six other women and five men were with her in Machakos, a town of 8,000 that serves as the county seat and is thus filled with government officials and schools.

The Americans helped residents of surrounding villages build roads and community centers.

Miss Hughes says she and a few of her group would go out to a village and join with lines of women swinging hoes and singing native chants in the language of the Warkamba tribe.

"You can communicate a lot of good will without being able to speak the same language."

She characterizes the people of Kenya as being "jolly" and "vivacious" despite the fact that their economic lot—while by no means destitute—is far from prosperous.

Two times a week, she taught English to women who had come into town to attend homecraft courses. "I learned how exciting teaching can be," she says, though quickly pointing out that the fact that she had to use an interpreter prevented her pedagogy from being as effective as it might have been.

At Brown, Miss Hughes is in charge of the UCA's Social Con-

Deanery Undergoes Changes To Increase U. H. Efficiency

The University has made several changes in the Administration in an effort to streamline and improve efficiency.

Robert O. Schulze, former Assistant Dean of the College, has been appointed Dean of the College.

Merton P. Stoltz, former Associate Dean of the Graduate School and Chairman of the department of economics, will occupy the newly-created position of Dean of the University.

Donald E. Walsh, a member of the University Administration for four years, will replace Robert E. Hill as Assistant Dean of the College. Hill will devote his full attention to his position as Assistant Director of Housing.

Schulze, who replaces Robert W. Morse, now Assistant Secretary of the Navy, came to Brown in 1955. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and received a master's degree from Columbia in 1952 and a Ph.D. from Michigan in 1956.

Schulze was appointed associate professor of sociology in 1961.

Walsh, who replaces Robert E. Hill as Assistant Dean of the College: Student Affairs, will be responsible for disciplinary action, counseling, and other administrative matters concerning undergraduate men.

Although "matters pertaining to disciplinary infractions" are his principal concern, Walsh does not see himself "as a policeman." He hopes to work out student problems with them and also intends to explore "new directions in social activities."

Walsh also believes that students' complaints and suggestions with regard to the refectionary deserve a more sympathetic hearing, and he hopes to set up a committee of faculty and representative students to explore the situation.

Walsh came to the University in 1960 as a financial aid officer responsible for administering scholarship awards, student loans, and student jobs. He graduated from Brown in 1956 and received a master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1961.

Benjamin Roman becomes Advisor on Student Affairs with offices in South Wayland. He is responsible for non-academic affairs, principally social activities on campus and graduate and undergraduate employment both on and off campus. All social activities must be registered and approved through his office.

Roman joined the University Administration in November, 1963, after many years of teaching in secondary schools around the country. He is a graduate of Brown University, the Class of 1925.

Manager of Men's Residences, John D. Sipes will leave October 6 and will be replaced by Bruce C. Dunham '62. Dunham, who majored in math, has been teaching at the Shattuck School in Faribault, Minn., since his graduation.

The University has also announced the appointment of two new Assistants to the Dean of the College.

They are Thomas A. Mutch, professor of geology, who will serve as a counsellor to the sophomore class, and C. Wayne Williams, instructor of history, who will counsel the freshman class.

Mutch joined the faculty in 1960 after receiving his doctorate from Princeton. Williams, who received a bachelor's degree from Williams College, was named assistant to the History Department in 1962.

Pembroke

A position of Dean of Students has been created at Pembroke College.

Named to fill the post is Mrs. Ruth Dohring. She is the mother of three children.

The new dean will assume her duties on October 1.

Miss Rosemary Pierrel continues in her position as Dean of Pembroke College, with Miss Gretchen Tonks as her assistant. Miss Pierrel is beginning her fourth year as head of the Pembroke deanery.

Stoltz

Merton P. Stoltz, who has been appointed to the newly-created position of Dean of the University, was until now Associate Dean of the Graduate School and chairman of the Department of Economics.

In his new position he will work closely with Barnaby C. Keeney, President of the University, and together they will be responsible for the selection and development of the faculty, for the improvement of the curriculum and instruction, and for supervision of all but the administrative aspects of university research.

There will continue to be separate deans for the three divisions of the university — The College, Pembroke College and the Graduate School. These deans will report to both the President and the Dean of the University. Dean Stoltz will not be interposed between them and the faculty, nor between them and the President.

For many years Dean Stoltz has been active in Rhode Island community affairs. In 1957 he headed the special Providence Committee on Municipal Revenue, commonly known as the Stoltz Committee, which rendered a comprehensive report on municipal finances two years later.

In 1961 he was a member of a similar group that studied state finances, known as the Rhode Island Fiscal Study Commission.

Dean Stoltz was director of a college-community research program that existed during most of the 1950's as a cooperative ar-

University Planning New Graduate School Complex

by MICHAEL SCHMITZ

The University is planning a $5,000,000 graduate center which would include both dormitories and office space, Merton P. Stoltz, dean of the University, said yesterday.

Stoltz stressed that the center is entirely in the planning stage. He said the impression given in Thursday's Providence Journal that "we are going to turn over a shovel tomorrow" is definitely wrong. Stoltz said construction conceivably could begin within a year.

The center will also include a commons building which to house a refectory, a lounge and recreation room, an administration center for the graduate school, meeting rooms, and suites for visiting scholars.

The Journal apparently first learned about the center from the University's petition before the Providence Building Board of Review to use scissors stairwells. Scissors stairwells cut across each other and save space, but they have never been used before in Rhode Island. It is not certain if the city building code, which says stairs must be "remotely" located, will allow scissors stairs.

The University, therefore, asked the board for a decision on the scissor stairs since an architect's plan using a compact core of these stairwells at the center of the building will be completely different from a plan using separate sets of stairwells which are 60 to 80 feet apart.

Stoltz confirmed that the Pow-

Sovereign Whipped

Special to the BROWN DAILY HERALD

The U.S. yacht Constellation trounced British challenger Sovereign by 20 min. and 24 sec. yesterday in the second race of the current best-of-seven America's Cup series.

The defeat was the most decisive in any America's Cup race since 1886 when Mayflower (U.S.) swamped Scottish challenger Galatea by 29 min. and 9 sec.

Sovereign has yet to win a race in this series. There will be no race today because the British requested after yesterday's thrashing that it be put off until tomorrow.

er Street parking lot is currently being considered for the center, which would include four dormitories, each housing 100 students. Three of the dormitories will be for men and one for women, but it has not been decided if most rooms would be suites, doubles, or singles.

Stoltz considered a capacity of 400 adequate for the Graduate School's 1100 enrollment since about 45% of the students are married.

Stoltz said that the University's lack of an adequate graduate center probably has prejudiced some students against Brown and added that the centers at Harvard, MIT, and Princeton are very attractive.

Today's graduate center should do more than house students, Stoltz said. He explained that it should be educational and provide an environment in which students can exchange ideas.

Details of the building are very vague, Stoltz said, because the design depends upon whether the scissors stairwells can be employed. Harvard and Columbia have both built new dormitories with scissors stairwells. It has not been decided how the building will be financed, Stoltz said.

School Boycott in New York

It all started last February.

New York City's Negro population decided that the most effective way to protest de facto segregation of schools would be to stage a massive boycott. Led by Bayard Rustin, the organizer of the March on Washington, 364,000 students stayed out of school and demanded immediate integration of city school facilities through a redrawing of districts and a busing of children from predominately Negro neighborhoods to white schools.

In reply, a Parents and Taxpayers Association (PAT) was formed by white families to protest the busing and to preserve neighborhood schools.

Faced with this difficult situation, the Board of Education tried to put forth a solution that would satisfy both sides. It called for the pairing of selected schools in which students from both white and Negro communities would attend one school for the first three grades of elementary school and the other for the last. This meant that some children would be bused out of their neighborhoods. The proposal was immediately rejected by PAT as being a capitulation to Negro pressure and by the Negro leaders who felt that it did not go far enough.

The proposal was also strongly criticized by both New York Senators Javits and Keating and was opposed in the Repub-

The Sun Also Sets

It has been said now and then (mostly then) that the sun never sets on the British Empire. This, of course, was back in the days when there was a British Empire. Now it is a Commonwealth and the sun is setting pretty regularly.

Yesterday afternoon the heavens convulsed and darkness descended upon the British as it had never done before. In fairness, it should be pointed out that Constellation's defeat of Sovereign was not the worst beating ever administered in the 113-year history of the America's Cup. It was perhaps the second worst.

We would not be so disturbed by Sovereign's pathetic showing were it not for the fact that its abysmal performance was indicative of what appears to be a trend: England is simply not fulfilling its immense potential as a responsible member of the North Atlantic alliance. This lack of excellence is lucidly exemplified by the stark realization that the country has not, in the last decade, produced anything more significant than the Beatles.

Say, whatever did happen to the British Empire?

Dean of Critics

Editor:

My almost boundless delight in seeing that the Trumpet of Truth is again hitting the presses was exceeded only by the exquisite pleasure I took in finding an unconscionable error in Issue No. 1

The concluding paragraph of your story on President Johnson states: "Three other U. S. Presidents—George Washington, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson—have received honorary degrees from Brown." Were I a pedant, I would quibble even about the strict accuracy of that. Inasmuch as they were awarded in 1790, 1797, and 1787, respectively, their degrees were received from "Rhode Island College." But I am, as you know, no pedant, so I will make no big thing of that.

It would ill behoove me, however, to fail to call to your and your readers' attention that Brown awarded honorary LL.D.'s to Woodrow Wilson in 1903, to William Howard Taft in 1914, and to Herbert Hoover in 1916.

While your obsession with colonial antiquities is, in a sense, befitting this bicentennial year, your apparent ignorance of certain more contemporary realities serves only to confirm a larger truth which I have long suspected of the HERALD.

ROBERT O. SCHULZE

lican Party Platform adopted in San Francisco. Lately Robert Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey have put themselves on the record against what they refer to as "long-distance busing."

This week, the parents of white children all over New York City complied with a PAT request and staged a boycott of schools for the first two days of classes. While only about 13,000 students were directly affected by the new plan and only 1,200 were actually to be bused away from their neighborhoods, about 275,000 children were kept home on the first day of the boycott. This is approximately 225,000 above the normal absentees for the first day of classes.

As a part of the protest, those white students who were to be bused will attend private schools.

While a boycott is not in the best interest of the students involved, the involuntary busing of children to achieve "statistical integration" is even more undesirable.

The concept of the neighborhood school, especially for elementary school children, is an extremely valid one. It is detrimental for a young child to be bused away from his own neighborhood into an alien environment where, for example, it would be impossible for him to have lunch at home or to stay after school to play. Basically, it removes him from the jurisdiction and care of his mother. In addition, since he is likely to make friends from outside his neighborhood, the busing restricts his social development. It is important for a young child to have friends in his own neighborhood whom he can associate with while he is not going to school.

If the rush of white children to private schools is any indication the new plan will not integrate schools but will leave them in their present segregated status. The case of Washington, D.C. is important to consider. The school districts of that city were completely integrated immediately after the Supreme Court decision in the Brown vs. Board of Education case. Soon thereafter white parents began sending their children to private schools, and at present the Washington school system is 80% Negro.

For these reasons it is evident that the latest Board of Education plan will not work and if it does, will work to the detriment of the children involved. Our sympathy in this issue is with the PAT and with those parents who choose to take the prerogative of sending their children to a private school.

Financial backing for the cooperative program, which is believed to be more extensive than similar programs in the range of its objectives, has been provided by sev-

Democrats Nominate All Endorsees

Rhode Island Democrats went to the polls yesterday and nominated all the candidates for major offices throughout the state that had been endorsed by the party committees.

In Providence, Joseph A. Doorley, Jr. was selected as the party nominee for Mayor. Doorley, who received 46.6% of the total vote, led Francis Roa and Edward F. Burke in the race for the post to be vacated by retiring incumbent Walter Reynolds.

On the state level, Lt. Gov. Edward P. Gallogly won an easy victory in the race for the nomination for Governor. Gallogly received 56.6% of the vote in his race against Rep. Alexander Walsh and John L. Rego for the right to face Republican incumbent John H. Chafee in November.

Burke was the administrative assistant to incumbent Mayor Reynolds, but failed to obtain endorsement from the city committee, although he was endorsed personally by Reynolds. Elmer E. Cornwell Jr., Chairman of the Political Science Department, was a campaign assistant to Burke.

Booters Can Win It Again

by STEVE SCHWARZ

Last year coach Cliff Stevenson's soccer team achieved an all-time "first" for Brown athletics by taking a share of an Ivy League title, and with numerous returning veterans plus an impressive group of sophomores Stevenson feels it may just happen again.

After over two weeks of double-session practices, and one scrimmage against the Coast Guard, Stevenson is impressed with the team's progress and is especially pleased with the rapid development of the sophomores on the squad.

One of the big question marks of this year's team is Bill Hooks. Hooks, all-Ivy as a sophomore and equally good last year despite a knee injury which still bothers him, has been working out with the team but Stevenson said there is only a 50-50 chance that he will play in the season opener against Wesleyan. Stevenson plans to use Hooks at center-forward, "his best position," instead of the right-inside position he has played previously. If Hooks is unable to play, Stevenson will use sophomore Gary Kaufman, who looked very good against the Coast Guard.

Heading the strong Brown defense this year will be co-captain and center halfback Phil Solomita who was an all-American, all-New England and all-Ivy selection last year. Stevenson said Solomita will probably team up with co-captain John Myslik and Gary Garriques in the halfback slots.

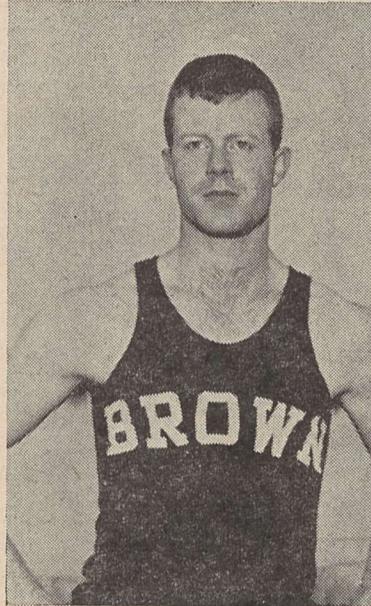

At fullback veteran Frank Forsberg is returning on the right side and there is some competition going on for the other slot between John Krupski, Gerry Lynch, and Tom Niederer. Senior Alan Walsh, all-Ivy last year, will again be in the Brown goal.

Although perhaps not as strong offensively as last year Stevenson has so many prospects among the forwards that he says he may use two units in the middle of the line. Especially prominent among the insides are veterans Phil McGuire and Bob Higginbottom, and sophomores Gerry Zimmerman and Dan Umanoff.

Stevenson says he will know a little more about how the team will shape up after the annual pre-season scrimmage with Adelphi to be held on Long Island Saturday. He noted that the team will start off the season with three tough games against Wesleyan, Penn and Williams. The home opener against Penn on October 3rd will be especially important since the Quakers are "the team to beat," in the league, according to Stevenson.
